

Music Quick Hits 2 | June 2017

Eric Christenson

Wednesday Jun. 28th, 2017

We first met Sage Leary when he was a young 14-year-old songwriter doing his thing and pumping out blues-infused rock tunes with skill that well-surpassed his age. He's still on the grind with his latest record "Already There" which released late last year, a collection of songs that touch all kinds of crazy genres like rock, blues, folk, psychedelic, funk, and more. Sage just graduated high school online with eAchieve Academy and even got to play some of his new songs at his graduation in Waukesha for tons of people, and he's been keeping busy playing shows locally at farmers markets, outdoor events, and other venues at a rapid pace. His newest record has this infectiously huge sound courtesy of Studio H in

Appleton, and when he attends UW-Eau Claire this fall, he said he's looking forward to meeting other musicians and getting a band going. The 17-year-old already has a huge amount of musical prowess to his name and this definitely won't be the last we hear from Sage Leary. You can catch Sage live at the Chippewa Falls Farmers Market in Avery Park on July 6 and the Eau Claire Downtown Farmers Market on July 8. To learn more about Sage, and check his upcoming schedule, head over to www.sageleary.com